This exercise helped us in understanding other people's code and how we can work on it. In our case we needed to had some extra lines of code to add special icons for the navigation menu

```
@media (max-width: 1024px) {
    .navbar icon {
        display: block;
       height: 55px;
       width: 55px;
        border-radius: 0%;
    img[alt] {
       width: auto;
    .nav-li p {
        display: none;
   div>p{
        font-weight:normal;
```

Icons added and paragraphs to help section the code for our responsive design

class="nav-li">
    <img src="./assets/bio.png" class="navbar icon" alt="biography">
   Biography
class="nav-li">
   <img src="./assets/social.png" class="navbar icon" alt="social media">
       Social Media
class="nav-li">
   <img src="./assets/contact form.png" class="navbar icon" alt="contact form">
       Contact Form
class="nav-li">
   <img src="./assets/plus sign.png" class="navbar icon" alt="see more">
       See More
```

We needed to understand the code, so we could know where our media queries needed to interact with

```
@media (max-width:812px) {
    header {
        background-image: linear-gradient(to bottom, □rgb(0, 0, 0), □#e29025);
    main {
        background-image: linear-gradient(310deg, □rgb(94, 94, 155), □#f17610);
    #navbar {
        background-image: linear-gradient(50deg, \squarergb(94, 94, 155), \square#f17610);

Regarding print it was more challenging because we needed to be able to print only the content that mattered

@media print {
    /* These rules only apply to the page when printed */
    header, #navbar{
        display:none
    }
    main, #div1{
        margin: 0;
        padding: 0;
    }
}
```

```
@media print {
    /* These rules only apply to the page when printed */
    header, #navbar{
        display:none
    }
    main, #div1{
        margin: 0;
        padding: 0;
    }
}
```

In conclusion, this exercise lead us to experience other teams code, learning how it works and understanding what we needed to code so that we could have a responsive and printable website.
